Summary

The guest speaker, Prof. Julian Raxworthy, Honorary Associate Professor, School of Architecture, University of Queensland gave an invigorating insight to landscape design and the processes involved in creating both artistic and pragmatic design solutions. He reiterated the importance of using observation as a key tool to a successful design process, and how the expression of landscape is the fundamental driver that governs any project's manifestation. In very simple words he traced the importance of getting answers from the land we are working with as he rightly said –“What we need to learn is already there in the landscape”, and it is this site context that contributes majorly to the perception and response to the design interventions suggested. The webinar was well received by the attendees, and Prof. Julian certainly created a lasting impression, on both aspiring as well as established landscape architects, that it is important to listen to one's intuition and design a system that is easy to follow and comprehend even by future generations.
